V. SUMMARY OF CLAIMED SUBJECT MATTER

In one aspect, the present invention provides devices and methods for assisting a person in achieving a desired or a proper alignment of a person's eyes (for example, while golfing). In one embodiment, as illustrated in Figures 1 through 4C, device 10 includes a support member 20 (as described on page 6 lines 2 and 3 of the specification) and a mechanism including a light source attached to support member (page 6 lines 17 and 18). The mechanism is adapted to project a generally linear extending projection of light on a surface so that the extending projection of light is visible to the person, in an orientation such that the light source generates a visible alignment line of light A on, for example, the ground in front of the golfer that is generally parallel to an alignment of the golfer's eyes when support member 20 is worn on or otherwise placed in operative connection with the golfer's head (for example, during putting). See, for example, page 6, lines 18 to 30 of the specification. The light source or mechanism can, for example, include a laser 70 and a generally cylindrical lens 75 positioned transversely to the light beam emanating from laser 70. See, for example, page 6 lines 22 to 25. As known in the optics arts, and as described on page 6 lines 25 to 29 of the specification, lens 75 creates a planar beam or fan of light which emanates perpendicular to the axial alignment of lens 75. This planar fan of light forms visible alignment line A on the ground parallel to the orientation of the golfer's eyes (that is, the projection of light is generally parallel to a line running transversely through the person's eyes).

Other embodiments of an alignment device 200 of the present invention and a method for determining alignment of a person's torso, are, for example, illustrated in Figure 5 and described at page 10 lines 5 to 26 of the specification. In this embodiment, alignment device 200 includes a support member including a band or belt member 220 upon which a light source is attached. As described above, a mechanism or light source generates a visible alignment line of light A on the ground in front of the golfer that is generally parallel to an alignment of that portion of the golfer's body upon which support member is worn. As also described above, the light source preferably comprises a laser 230 and a generally cylindrical lens 240 positioned transversely to the light beam emanating from laser 230. The light source can be adjustable relative to belt member 220 to enable the user to adjust the position of line A away from the body of the user. Device 200 of Figure 5 can be worn on any portion of the user's body or torso (for example, on the chest or sternum region to study the alignment of the shoulders/chest and/or on the waist or hip region to study the alignment of the hips) to provide to the person an indication of the alignment of a line passing transversely through the portion of the person's torso. The alignment of device 200 can be checked or calibrated simply by standing against a wall and ensuring that line A is generally parallel to the wall. A switch for turning laser 230 on and off can be located on the laser or remotely.

In view of the foregoing, the Appellant respectfully requests that the Board of Appeals and Interferences reverse the Examiner's rejection of the claims, and that the Examiner indicate the allowability of Claims 1, 2, 13-24 and 29-31 and arrange for an official Notice of Allowance to be issued in due course.

Respectfully submitted,
CHRISTOPHER M. MACROGLOU
